If the problems facing kids across America begin in early childhood, then so should the solutions. One of the most promising avenues is to establish dedicated, data-driven, public-private partnerships to support early childhood interventions.

Businesses, organizations, and individuals that understand the needs of a community – and share a stake in the well-being of the local population – are ideally placed to launch innovative early childhood interventions, and adapt them in response to new data or changing needs.

INCREASING THE QUALITY AND ACCESSIBILITY OF EARLY CARE AND EDUCATION, AND CAREFULLY MONITORING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF SUCH PROGRAMS, ENABLES COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS TO ELIMINATE BARRIERS TO ACADEMIC AND PROFESSIONAL SUCCESS, SETTING YOUNG PEOPLE ON THE PATH TO BETTER JOBS AND ECONOMIC INDEPENDENCE.

That's the kind of foundational change that gives children a fighting chance to turn dreams into reality, and pass along that success to the next generation.
